According to UN (UN Population Division, 2014) more than half of the world's population live in urban settlements. A remarkable increase in population movement, globalization and migration have led to the rise of rich linguistic and ethnocultural diversity in contemporary societies. Under these circumstances, the need to regulate this diversity by means of designing and implementing various language policies becomes challenging.

In your essay, please refer to (one or more of) the following points:

- education
- language in the city
- Immigrant/minority languages
- language rights
