The globalized world of the 21st century has been characterized by superdiversity (Vertovec, 2007) More than half of the world's population live in urban settlements. A remarkable increase in population movement, as an inevitable process of globalization and migration, has led to the rise of rich linguistic and ethnocultural diversity in contemporary societies. In this regard, the need to regulate this diversity by means of designing and implementing various language policies becomes challenging.

If language policy is shaped by dominant ideologies and language attitudes, as well as by sociohistorical, cultural, demographic, geopolitical, and economic considerations, how can/should it respond to the current transformations in the society?

In your essay, please be specific, include various considerations above and refer to (one or more of) the following points:

- education
- language in the city
- immigrant languages
- language rights
- linguistic/ethnic minorities
