MODERN POLITICS

10th Grade

to be completed within 120 minutes Maximum score – 100 points

Task 1. (maximum grade - 25 points)

In the school newspaper Spinoza's Smile, a talented 7th grader Ivan Petrov wrote a popular article about state structure and its history as a way of organizing society. In the article, there was the following statement: "The modern state had various forms; in Europe, it could be the Hanseatic League, or the union of all Christianity under the Pope of Rome, or Italian city states. Prior to this, there were Greek city-sates, where there was no clear boundary between an administrative system and the community of citizens ...but most of all, there were the familiar forms of the modern state, such as empires or national states; the latter of these was essentially an enormous organization, held together by a colossal bureaucratic system, penetrating all layers of society."

Ivan's older sister, an HSE student, read his article and noted a crucial inaccuracy in this excerpt, citing various researchers in political science and historical sociology. Ivan, after considering the arguments of his sister, concurred, and in the next issue of the newspaper, he published a correction and a commentary to his original article.

- 1. What was the biggest mistake stated in the excerpt from Ivan's article?
- 2. What are the features commonly associated with the modern state?
- 3. Provide examples of "classical" empires and polities from history. What Italian city states are being discussed and when was their golden age (you may indicate centuries)?
